Anti-Red Fund Merits Check

Urges Brownell To Start Investigation

WASHINGTON, April 6 (A) -Francis Biddle, former attorney general, called today for a Justice Department investigation of whether Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) unlawfully diverted to his own use and profit money donated for his fight against Communists. McCarthy retorted that Biddle was a "thoroughly discredited" man and denounced his action as 'criminal libel."

"Normally I would call Biddle's case to the attention of the U.S. attorney or the attorney general for indictment for criminal libel," McCarthy said. "However, he and his crowd of Communist defenders may even be doing me a favor by this libelous attack.

"Besides I am too busy with work of much greater importance than to take time out to waste it on a man who has been as thoroughly discredited and who is as well known for what he is as Biddle." Backed By ADA

Biddle, a Democrat, made the demand in a letter to Atty. Gen. Brownell. The letter was signed by Biddle as national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, and by Robert R. Nathan, chairman of ADA's Executive Committee. It was made public by ADA, which describes itself as "an organization of loyal, progressive Americans dedicated to the battle against communism and the pres-

Rail Workers Take 3-Cent Pay Cutback

WASHINGTON, April 6 (A)-The nation's rail workers took a threecent hourly pay cut today which will lower rail payrolls an estimated 7½ million dollars a month.

The wage reduction was dictated by the government's old-style costof-living index. This index, abandoned in December but revived on orders of President Eisenhower in late January, showed a 1.6 per cent drop in retail prices between November and February.

Rail wages are adjusted each three months to reflect changes in living costs. The big November-February decline, caused mainly by lower food prices, was enough to force an automatic drop of three cents in hourly wages.

The February index was 188.6, three points below last November's 191.6. The index uses the average price level in the 1935-1939 period as a base of 100.

Unions representing 1,300,000 rail workers were partly responsible for the White House order reviving the old-style index.

If their contracts had been adjusted so that the official, or new, price index had been used as a wage yardstick, these workers might have lost only one cent an hour in wages. The reason is that the old index is much more sentitive to changes in food prices than the new. Thus when food prices are falling, as they fell rapidly during the November-February period, the old index moves down lke Officiates At First more quickly than the new one.

Celanese reports on 1952 to our employees and the community an open letter to our employees and to the plant communities:

Since the middle of 1951, the textile industry in the United States as well as throughout the world has been in a badly depressed condition. The evils of scare buying and accumulation of inventories arising at the beginning of the Korean War have been difficult to overcome. We had looked for a substantial recovery in 1952, which materialized in the third quarter but thereafter tapered off. At the present time there has been a moderate improvement.

New approaches are under way to stimulate the market's use of acetate yarns and fibers, as we recognize that entirely new selling techniques are necessary in what has become a highly competitive market. The Company has had little benefit from defense spending.

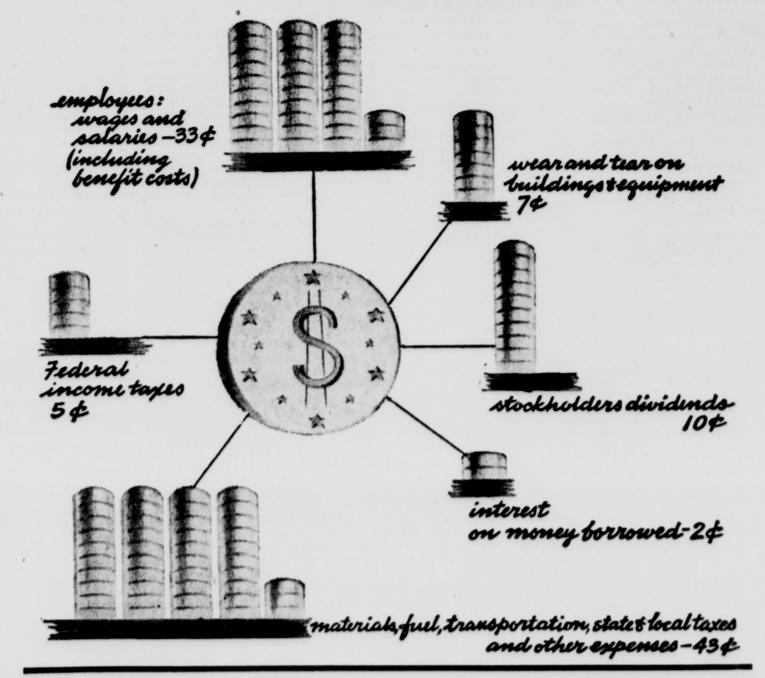

Realizing the necessity for greater diversification, considerable effort has been put behind the chemical and plastics business to increase our volume and to provide additional products. The results have been satisfactory-our chemical volume having increased during the year. The new chemical plant at Pampa was brought into production in the last quarter of the year and this should provide additional opportunities in 1953. The volume for plastics was substantially maintained during the year and with the development of new uses should be improved this year.

We are pressing ahead with our foreign activities in Canada and the Latin American courtries. In Canada, initial difficulties with the pulp plant have been overcome and the plant is now in full production. Production in the Latin American plants is proceeding satisfactorily.

For 1953, the outlook for increased consumption of yarn and fiber by mills looks favorable and we look forward to a large volume of chemicals and plastics.

HIGHLIGHTS of the YEAR

In Textiles

Amcelle developed the thick-and-thin "Celaperm"* yarn, a Celanese "first," as well as a basic range of color-pigmented regular filament yarns, staple and tow.

At Celco the expansion of cellulose acetate facilities was virtually completed.

Celriver saw progress in the expansion of production facilities and power reserves.

At Lanese the building program was completed, and additional facilities installed. A program of spun yarn development was launched and pilot plant facilities added for evaluation of new yarns.

Bridgewater went ahead with the expansion of its development department for the benefit of yarn knitting customers.

In Plastics

At Belvidere, additional film extrusion facilities were added.

At Newark, the Administration Building was put in shape to receive the headquarters staff of the Plastics Division.

In Chemicals

The new petro-chemical plant at Pampa, Texas, was brought into operation in November for production of acetic acid, acetic anhydride, acetone and methanol.

At the Chemcel Plant at Bishop, Texas, new facilities were added for the production of paraformaldehyde and trioxane.

And at Clarkwood, Texas, the new administration and permanent laboratory buildings were completed.

LOOKING AHEAD

Here are some of the preparations Celanese is making to build business for the plants and the Company:

Additional facilities are being installed at the Chemcel and Pampa plants for the production of normal butyl alcohol and vinyl acetate. A multi-million pound annual production program of the vinyl acetate monomer at the Pampa plant is scheduled to begin in the third quarter. At Belvidere, steps are being taken to expand the production of polyethelene film. At Amcelle new facilities are being provided to increase the volume of "Celaperm" yarn, staple fiber and tow.

At Rome beaming facilities for rayon varn are being added. Facilities also are being provided for making thick-andthin rayon yarn in addition to the regular filament yarns.

And at other plants, work is progressing on new facilities.

Iran: Too Late?

Premier Mossadegh's rejection of the latest American-backed British offer for a solution of the oil impasse came on the second anniversary of the passage of Iran's oil nationalization law. Now there is little hope left; the problem begins to seem insoluble.

Some British officials think Mossadegh may have left the door open a crack to further negotiations. If so, it's a slim crack, on which to base a slimmer hope.

Perhaps no solution was possible two years ago. But the whole affair represents one of the most abject failures British diplomacy has undergone in recent times. Britain has had a genius for holding the cooperation and even the friendship of peoples she once

Iran, though technically independent, was virtually a British colony and the Iranian people knew it. British rule was less responsible in Iran because it was unacknowledged. There is some truth in Mossadegh's statement, in this latest rejection, that the British meddled in elections to secure power for governments subservient to British interests.

One result of this government by indirection is that Iran was not prepared for independence. She still lacks a trained civil service and an adequate supply of responsible public officials capable of leadership.

Iran may by now be water over the dam. The course indicated now is to try to avoid more Irans in the Middle East. It must be recognized that Iran's oil nationalization, which makes no sense whatever in rational business and financial terms, has actually been a revolt against disguised colonial rule.

Thorpe's Tomb

It might seem to be an exaggeration to credit Jim Thorpe with being the greatest athlete this country ever produced, but there's no doubt that he was, by a wide margin, the greatest athlete of his time. And some, great athletes in their own right, still hold that since his day there has never been another like him.

It is easily understandable, therefore, why widely scattered communities vied for the honor of providing a suitable tomb for him.

Paavo Nurmi, Finland's famous runner, adds his testimony to Thorpe's athletic prowess. In 1912, at Stockholm, Thorpe won four events in the pentathlon and finished third in the others. In the decathlon he scored 8,412 points out of a possible 10,000-a record yet to be equaled.

Thorpe was forced to return his trophies, valued at $50,000, because he had played baseball the previous summer for $60 a month, which made him a professional. But this action by the Olympics authorities did not make his rivals his equals.

Thorpe made the Carlisle Indians a terror on the gridiron against the most formidable college teams of the day. He was to come on leaner and sadder days. Yet in 1950 he was named the greatest football player and the greatest athlete of the 20th Century in a poll of sports writers. Until the day he died the past could not be taken from him.

His tomb will become a shrine for all who are interested in athletics.

Last Phase Drama

There is no greater drama than that of the triumph of human life over death or disease. There was drama of high order in the talk given in New York at a dinner by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. It revealed to the nation that a new polio vaccine-effective against the three types which maim and kill thousands of children annually -is now at hand.

A public accustomed to disappointment over efforts to lick polio was probably resigned to hearing that the vaccine wouldn't be available for the coming "polio year." But at least parents could know that the battle is drawing rapidly to a close. As the spokesman for the foundation puts it:

"We are now dealing with facts, and not theories ... it does appear that the approach in these investigations may lead to the desired objective."

Dr. Jonas E. Salk, a young research scientist, told how polio virus had been weakened when introduced into a creamy vaccine. Tried on 90 children and adults, it helped build antibodies against the three virulent strains of polio. The protection has now lasted for

Dr. Salk and his associates hope this may be extended for additional months, and perhaps years. They want to try it on perhaps 2,000 to 5,000 more children before they will feel justified in turning laboratories loose to produce the vaccine loose in

Meanwhile the only preventative for polio this summer remains the gamma globulin injections.

There's a little streak of ham in everyone. That is why the New York Times thinks it would be unwise to start televising press conferences.

While President Eisenhower is presumably still conferences, the Times proceeds to view with alarm. quoting a President word-for-word.

But it is the streak-of-ham angle that intrigues the Times. Would the reporters wear TV makeup? If they didn't, most of them might look like a rogues' gallery, and the reputation of the press would suffer. Things might come to such a pass that newspapers, to protect their reputations, would start to compete for the most telegenic reporters. Most serious of all,

Mouth Cancer

The mouth is not immune to cancer and every lesion that fails to heal within a few weeks should be viewed with suspicion. Malignancies in this area are not common but when they occur are likely to grow rapidly. Statistics show that, when untreated, 80 per cent are beyond help within 18 months.

Tumors can develop in almost any part of the oral cavity. The tongue is a favorite site, followed by the floor of the mouth, the tonsils, cheeks, and pharynx. Most malignancies of this type develop initially as a swelling or hard nodule which ulcerates, producing an open lesion. It usually is painless and is surrounded by a hard, irregular border. The tumor grows rapidly as cancer goes, not only on the surface but internally.

As with cancer elsewhere, the cause is not known. Chronic irritation and dental disorders usually ar blamed. Tobacco is mentioned frequently but definite proof is lacking and many victims of carcinoma of the mouth have never smoked or chewed tobacco. Apparently the oral tissues are susceptible because of a hereditary tendency along this line.

In treating these disorders it is essential to eliminate every cancer cell. In the past, radium and X-ray were the most popular remedies and they still are used in small lesions. But this treatment is not satisfactory for all mouth tumors and occasionally the surrounding healthy tissue is burned, leaving painful scars. Surgery and radiation is preferred. The operation itself may be difficult and tedious but mortality is practically nil when it is done by experts. The mouth, throat, and neck abound in important nerves and blood vessels and is no place for a nov-

If cancer has spread, an extensive operation deep in the neck may be necessary to save life. In some instances, part of the bone of the upper or lower jaw will be removed. In the past this was a serious cosmetic handicap but modern prosthetic appliances do wonders along this line. It is possible to insert a new jaw, nose, or entire side of the face. As a result, many afflicted persons return to work after being cured. It is well to reemphasize the fact that the primary concern is to eradicate the malignant cells, which means that the surgeon must be given free rein on the method to be used. Let him decide whether to operate, use radium or X-ray,

Mouth cancers are not always easy to diagnose. In the past, when syphilis was rife, the man or woman with a positive Wassermann test was likely to be treated for syphilis whenever an ulcer developed in the mouth. The delay in making the diagnosis of cancer often spelled the difference between life and death. Nowadays, syphilis is treated more rapidly and, in addition, our modern physicians would suggest removal of a small piece of the ulcer for microscopic study (biopsy). The pre-cancerous lesion, leucoplakia, is given more serious consideration today. If these white patches which appear in the mouth are neglected, they may become malignant at a later

Mrs. K. writes: What is saddleblock anesthesia?

In this procedure, the part of the body that fits the saddle is anesthetized by injecting an anesthetic such as procaine into the base of the spine. The End Of Stalin

WASHINGTON The possibility that Josef V. Stalin was somehow murdered by his heirs is no longer ruled out. Russian experts in the State Department and intelligence services were already amazed by the rapid reversal of the dead Stalin's policies. Then came the exoneration of the famous "murdering clique" of Kremlin doctors, who were ar-

Stalin fell ill. The "Pravda" announcement contained an unprecedented hint that evidence against the doctors had been extorted by torture. The whole event was astonishing. It has opened the field for every form of speculation, including the theory that Stalin was done away with by other leading members of the Soviet regime.

rested and accused just before

At this stage, of course, this theory is speculation, pure and simple. Yet this highly colored theory is being soberly discussed by key men in the government. That is the best measure of the prevalence of wild surmise about Soviet policies and purposes.

Surmise is so prevalent in turn because of the impression that has been made here by the upheaval in Moscow. By now, you only have to itemize changes of policy aland blood transfusions occur but ready made, in order to be convinced that the upheaval has got to be taken very seriously.

Soviet Foreign Minister Viacheslav Molotov has strongly seconded Chou Enlai. At the United Nations, Andrei Vishinski has sought to renew negotiations about disarmament and atomic energy control. Ways to avoid any further incidents on the air borders are now being discussed, by Soviet request, in Berlin. Kennan Was Aware

> In the domestic sphere, Stalin was not in his grave before the Soviet government was made over. The complex arrangements made in his lifetime, at the recent Congress of the Russian Communist party, were promptly set aside. A new triumvirate emerged, composed of Premier Malenkov, Security Minister Beria, and War Minister Bulganin, with Molotov seemingly shorn of state power but directing foreign affairs. The fact that Malenkov was hardly more than the equal of the other triumvirs was then publicly marked, when he and the vital control of party pa-

Until this last event, what had happened was certainly unexpected, yet not absolutely inconsistent with past loyalty to Stalin. In the announcement about the doctors. however, no one could fail to see a strong implied criticism of former ways of doing business. That is why the experts are now wondering whether Stalin's heirs did not take steps to free themselves from the dangerous domination of a "frightened, difficult, petulant old man," as George F. Kennan has described Stalin in his old age.

The Eisenhower administration might well break its rule now against consulting former Ambassador Kennan, since he seems to have been the only man who foresaw even a part of what is now going on. Before leaving Moscow, he told the State Department as well as Moscow foreign correspondents that an important group in the Kremlin wanted a change of policy.

Committee Issues Orders

In his view the dissident group-Bulganin was named as a member -believed that the Soviet Union was dangerously over-extended in the Far East and losing ground in Europe. Therefore, in Kennan's phrase, they wished to "stop bucking the line and start throwing forward passes." That is a good definition of the change in Moscow to

There are other significant symptoms. The posthumous deification of Stalin has been strangely dropped by the Soviet press since the time of his funeral. (Kennan has also said he would not be surprised if Stalin ended as an "arch-traitor to the revolution.") The transformation of Malenkov into a god on earth, begun after his accession to power, has been abruptly stopped since the transfer of the party secretariat to Khrushchev. Orders are now issued in the name of the party central committee instead of by Malenkov personally.

There are other interesting lines of speculation, too. For instance, the doctors were accused of murdering Zhdanov, who was Malenkov's bitter enemy. Suppose the accusation had been true. What But how Stalin died and even what rivalries may be developing matter less than the obvious fact that Stalin's death is opening all sorts of new vistas. Maybe they will be very hopeful vistas, if we do not forget that forward passing can be even more dangerous than and Manuel Richard Kulukundis. They had to act in a hurry to escape deportation, but by some miracle of congressional wire-pulling or lobbying the entire Kulukundis family got their names tacked on the tail of this special bill permitting them to remain in the U.S. Shipment To Russian Port

This same man who so badly wanted to stay in this country, last month sent one of his ships, sold him by the United States, to help undermine this country

On February 27, the S.S. Hadiotis on which the United States still has a mortgage of $310,700, sailed first into the port of Kaohsiung in Formosa, then proceeded, via Japan, to the Communist port of Dairen. Manchuria, now under control of the Red army.

This ex-American ship, formerly the S.S. James M. Courts, was sold by the U.S. government for a song and has been sent by Kulukundis to such other iron curtain ports as Odessa, Russia, July 1950; Gdansk, Poland, September 1950; Gdynia, Poland, December 1950; Novorossiisk, Russia, November

Uncle Sam Asleep

Actually, it would have been a simple matter for the U.S. government to have tied up many of these Greek ships immediately after this column's expose two years ago. First, there are clauses in several contracts permitting the government to recapture the ships they don't pass inspection. Second, it's easy for the Coast Guard's Office of Merchant Marine Safety to harass ships indefinitely with life-boat inspections, bilge inspections, health inspections, until a ship loses more money than it's worth to trade with the Reds.

But just the opposite of this happened. Instead, some of these Greek ships violated safety rules with impunity. And Kulukundis, for one, seemed to have dockside government officials eating out of his hand.

For instance, here is a secret memo involving a Kulukundis ship, the S.S. Nathaniel B. Palmer, arrogantly asking for more time to prepare for government inspection following arrival at New Haven, Conn., on Nov. 16, 1948:

"On his arrival at the dock, the master was greeted by American Bureau and Coast Guard officials. In view of the fact that Captain Diaz is 'very conscientious' about his loading, he respectfully requests that in the future he not be visited by government officials until he has had at least two hours pumping time. Enough said in

The implication, of course, is that Kulukundis had the power to delay U.S. government inspectors from inspecting his ships just as he was able to "induce" congressmen to pass special laws permitting him and his family to remain

These are just a few of the things Senator McCarthy should investi-Greek Wealth

He should also look into the way the Greeks got their ships and what they pay in taxes. Unlike thousands of other patriotic Greek-Americans, who have settled down in the U.S., the Greek shippers pay few taxes either in the U.S. or Greece. And they got their ships by paying 25 per cent down after a kindly Uncle Sam turned over 98 Liberty ships to the Tsaldaris government. Then, thanks to Marshall Plan trade, many Greeks paid for the entire cost of the ship in two or three voyages. by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON-Viewed in the perspective of history, the McCarthy effort to help put an end to trade with our enemies in Korea has many a precedent behind it which indicates that memories are short nowadays in Washington. Or perhaps the form of things has become more important than the sub-

The basic questions are these: 1. Can a congressional committee "negotiate" an agreement with individuals on phases of certain controversial problems normally tackled by the executive branch of the government? The answer is that it has happened before, as a few illustrations from past experience will coroborate. 2. Can a congressional committee or its individual members deal with ambassadors and representatives or foreign governments on matters of foreign policy? The answer is that they have done so in the past and probably will continue to do so in the future.

No Court Restrictions

3. Is foreign policy exclusively an executive matter, or does the Senate have rights which grow out of the constitutional provision that treaties with foreign governments must be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate? The answer is with anybody in the world in order mittees, is entitled to communicate with anybody in he world in order to get the desired information for treaty-making purposes or for legislation generally affecting foreign countries. No restrictions have ever been imposed by the Supreme Court upon congressional committees in the gathering of information from individuals inside or outside the United States.

For the fact is that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee under various administrations has permitted foreign ambassadors and ministers to discuss informally with committee members their proposed policies and to give "assurances" that have the force of "agreements." Perhaps the most outstanding example of a so-called agreement or understanding "negotiated" by members of a Senate committee occurred in 1920, when Viscount Grey came to America as British ambassador. He spent a good deal of time discussing an important question with the then chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the late Henry Cabot Lodge, grandfather of the present American representative on the UN. In various history books the subject matter of the conferences which the British diplomat had with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is described. Viscount Grey declared publicly after resigning his post immediately on his return to England that the so-called Lodge reservations to the Versailles Treaty covering American entry into the League of Nations should be accepted by the Allies. There are intimations in some of the historical works of that period that, in exchange for Britain's support of Lodge's position as against that of Mr. Wilson, Viscount Grey got an agreement that the Republican-Democratic coalition favoring the Lodge reservations would support the six-vote formula for the British Dominions in the League of Nations. The President favored this, but several Republican and Democratic senators had opposed

The press of Britain and France almost unanimously supported Viscount Grey's "agreement" on his return to Europe and, while the British and French governments made no public endorsements, it was an open secret they were ready to go along with his views and with the "agreement" he had reached with the American senators. This was an important "negotiation." The Wilson administration didn't like it. Had the "agreement," however, been concurred in by only a few of the Wilson supporters in the Senate. it might have changed the whole course of history and helped to prevent a second world war.

Prerogative Of Executive Time and again in the past, informal assurances of various kinds have been given the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate by diplomatic representatives of foerign governments, and this has had a great deal to do with the course of American executive and legislative policy. The conferences between American senators and diplomats of the government of India during the wheat negotiation a couple of years ago is an instance fresh in memory.

In recent years, as large appropriations for foreign aid have been before Congress, it has not been unusual for foreign diplomats to contact senators and representatives. Reports of congressional sentiment or the private reactions of particular senators have been cabled back by the diplomats to their governments, and many a foreign policy matter has been affected by such arrangements, Also many senators and representatives on special committees have gone abroad in recent years on legislative missions and have frequently contacted high officials of foreign governments.

Whether one chooses to call all this "negotiations" or "infringement" on foreign-policy making is a quibble. Formal negotiations and agreements are, of course, the prerogative of the executive when made between governments. What individuals do, however, in relation to Congress, whether they be American citizens or foreign nationals or foreign government officials, seems to be largely between them and the memgers of Congress. One thing is clear - nothing can be 'negotiated' by senators or representatives that binds the executive branch, though much can be done to influence policy on the legislative side and indirectly the executive policy, too.

Burma

Burma is a country that lies southwest of China and is a gateway into the sub-continent of Asia. On the Yunnan-Burmese border are a number of aboriginal peoples of various Indo-Chinese or-

Since 1826 a part of British India, Burma on January 4, 1948, was recognized as a separate state by Great Britain. It did not become a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, preferring to stand alone. It is, however, a member of the United Nations.

Since it became independent, Burma has been beset by the usual effort of the Communists to infiltrate the country, producing considerable disorder. There have been a number of rebellious groups, the Karens, the White Flag Communists, the Red Flag Communists, Army Mutineers, dissident elements in the People's Volunteer Organization and a Nationalist Chinese guerilla band that moved into Burma from the province of Yunnan and has been fighting both the Burmese and the Chinese Communists since then.

Burma recognized Soviet China in December 1949. The Burmese have received financial aid from the British Commonwealth and from the United States. From the very start, however, its first prime minister, Thakin Nu, on May 26, 1948, formed a new party which set up a straight Marxist program. Since 1948, a strong anti-American and anti-British sentiment has expressed itself. not as much in the government as among the masses of the

The presence of the Nationalist Chinese guerrillas in Burma on the Yunnan border has been a factor of disturbance, particularly as the Burmese prefer to be on friendly terms with Mao Tzetung's government. In many parts of Asia, it is believed that Russia and her great Asiatic satellite, Soviet China, will eventually triumph, that Russia will count noses between those who favored Soviet China and those who were opposed, and these countries prefer to play it safe.

Therefore, the Burmese would like the Nationalist Chinese guerrillas withdrawn. They have no way of dealing with Chiang Kaishek on the subject. Actually, his guerrillas have done considerable fighting there.

What happens is that the guerrillas fight to invade China, move in a distance, are driven back into

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Burma. The Burmese try to prevent them from coming; the guerrillas get their arms and munitions, reform, go back across the border for some more fighting. This is excellent guerrilla tactics. keeping a Chinese Communist force pinned down on the border. It probably will never be proved how these Chinese Nationalist guerrillas recruit their forces. Over the past four years, there must have been numerous casualties; yet the guerrillas have increased their numbers. It is probably that many Chinese living in Yunnan and in Burma have joined them. It is also possible that many Chinese from Formosa have made their way to this

The Burmese expected the government of the United States to force Chiang Kai-shek to withdraw these guerrillas. There are those in Washington who would favor some such pressure on Chiang, but Chiang is committed to the use of guerrillas on every entrance into China, if he can find a way of putting them there and using them. He will fight his guerrilla war against Soviet China as best he

Meanwhile the Burmese have come up with the extraordinarily novel idea that they will reject American financial assistance because the United States has failed to get Chiang's guerrillas out of Burma. This may sound like a new wrinkle in the United States, but many countries believe that they do us a favor by taking our aid. They believe that if they do not take our money, unemployment will increase in this country. It might be advantageous to let them have their way.

The Burmese are also citing Formosa as an aggressor in this situation. Chiang could, with good Oriental reasoning, establish that his government has no direction over these particular guerrillas, as they are Chinese who got stuck where they are by the course

I know the kind of Chinese who compose these guerrilla bands. If Chiang interfered with their love of country and a good fight, they would repudiate him. They are the stuff that made the Yunnanese armies so effective in the civil wars of China. They are a powerful breed of men, mountaineers, who fight for their own soil.

Iran: Too Late?

Member of The Associated Press

Premier Mossadegh's rejection of the latest American-backed British offer for a solution of the oil impasse came on the second anniversary of the passage of Iran's oil nationalization law. Now there is little hope left; the problem begins to seem insoluble.

Some British officials think Mossadegh may have left the door open a crack to further negotiations. If so, it's a slim crack, on which to base a slimmer hope.

Perhaps no solution was possible two years ago. But the whole affair represents one of the most abject failures British diplomacy has undergone in recent times. Britain has had a genius for holding the cooperation and even the friendship of peoples she once ruled.

Iran, though technically independent, was virtually a British colony and the Iranian people knew it. British rule was less responsible in Iran because it was unacknowledged. There is some truth in Mossadegh's statement, in this latest rejection, that the British meddled in elections to secure power for governments subservient to British interests.

One result of this government by indirection is that Iran was not prepared for independence. She still lacks a trained civil service and an adequate supply of responsible public officials capable of leadership.

Iran may by now be water over the dam. The course indicated now is to try to avoid more Irans in the Middle East. It must be recognized that Iran's oil nationalization, which makes no sense whatever in rational business and financial terms, has actually been a revolt against disguised colonial rule.

Thorpe's Tomb

It might seem to be an exaggeration to credit Jim Thorpe with being the greatest athlete this country ever produced, but there's no doubt that he was, by a wide margin, the greatest athlete of his time. And some, great athletes in their own right, still hold that since his day there has never been another like him.

It is easily understandable, therefore, why widely scattered communities vied for the honor of providing a suitable tomb for him.

Paavo Nurmi, Finland's famous runner, adds his testimony to Thorpe's athletic prowess. In 1912, at Stockholm, Thorpe won four events in the pentathlon and finished third in the others. In the decathlon he scored 8,412 points out of a possible 10,000-a record yet to be equaled. Thorpe was forced to return his trophies, valued at $50,000, because he had played baseball the previous summer for $60 a month, which made him a professional. But this action by the Olympics authorities did not make his rivals his equals.

Thorpe made the Carlisle Indians a terror on the gridiron against the most formidable college teams of the day. He was to come on leaner and sadder days. Yet in 1950 he was named the greatest football player and the greatest athlete of the 20th Century in a poll of sports writers. Until the day he died the past could not be taken from him.

His tomb will become a shrine for all who are interested in athletics.

Last Phase Drama

There is no greater drama than that of the triumph of human life over death or disease. There was drama of high order in the talk given in New York at a dinner by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. It revealed to the nation that a new polio vaccine-effective against the three types which maim and kill thousands of children annually -is now at hand.

A public accustomed to disappointment over efforts to lick polio was probably resigned to hearing that the vaccine wouldn't be available for the coming "polio year." But at least parents could know that the battle is drawing rapidly to a close. As the spokesman for the foundation puts it:

"We are now dealing with facts, and not theories ... It does appear that the approach in these investigations may lead to the desired objective."

Dr. Jonas E. Salk, a young research scientist, told how polio virus had been weakened when introduced into a creamy vaccine. Tried on 90 children and adults, it helped build antibodies against the three virulent strains of polio. The protection has now lasted for

Dr. Salk and his associates hope this may be extended for additional months, and perhaps years. They want to try it on perhaps 2,000 to 5,000 more children before they will feel justified in turning laboratories loose to produce the vaccine loose in

Meanwhile the only preventative for polio this summer remains the gamma globulin injections.

Pressed Ham

There's a little streak of ham in everyone. That is why the New York Times thinks it would be unwise to start televising press conferences.

While President Eisenhower is presumably still giving thought to the use of TV to broadcast press conferences, the Times proceeds to view with alarm. Presidents are human and fallible. For that reason, a President's response to rapid-fire questions may not be quoted word-for-word without express permission. Until this rule was firmly established, Presidential press conferences could not have been considered an effective institution. TV would blow it sky-high by quoting a President word-for-word. But it is the streak-of-ham angle that intrigues the Times. Would the reporters wear TV makeup? If they didn't, most of them might look like a rogues' gallery, and the reputation of the press would suffer. Things might come to such a pass that newspapers, to protect their reputations, would start to compete for the most telegenic reporters. Most serious of all, could reporters be depended on not to start hamming?

The Times is tactful about it. "We know newspapermen," it says. "They are hard-working, selfeffacing and modest to a fault. But" - there was bound to be a catch - "would they remain so under the contemplated circumstances? Would anybody?" It must be admitted that there have been newspapermen whose temptation-resisting quotient was well below 100. How they might react to the weekly temptation to become TV hams can only be surmised.

Mouth Cancer

The mouth is not immune to cancer and every lesion that fails to heal within a few weeks should be viewed with suspicion. Malignancies in this area are not common but when they occur are likely to grow rapidly. Statistics show that, when untreated, 80 per cent are beyond help within 18 months.

Tumors can develop in almost any part of the oral cavity. The tongue is a favorite site, followed by the floor of the mouth, the tonsils, cheeks, and pharynx. Most malignancies of this type develop initially as a swelling or hard nodule which ulcerates, producing an open lesion. It usually is painless and is surrounded by a hard, irregular border. The tumor grows rapidly as cancer goes, not only on the surface but internally.

As with cancer elsewhere, the cause is not known. Chronic irritation and dental disorders usually ar blamed. Tobacco is mentioned frequently but definite proof is lacking and many victims of carcinoma of the mouth have never smoked or chewed tobacco. Apparently the oral tissues are susceptible because of a hereditary tendency along this line.

In treating these disorders it is essential to eliminate every cancer cell. In the past, radium and X-ray were the most popular remedies and they still are used in small lesions. But this treatment is not satisfactory for all mouth tumors and occasionally the surrounding healthy tissue is burned, leaving painful scars. Surgery and radiation is preferred. The operation itself may be difficult and tedious but mortality is practically nil when it is done by experts. The mouth, throat, and neck abound in important nerves and blood vessels and is no place for a nov-

If cancer has spread, an extensive operation deep in the neck may be necessary to save life. In some instances, part of the bone of the upper or lower jaw will be removed. In the past this was a serious cosmetic handicap but modern prosthetic appliances do wonders along this line. It is possible to insert a new jaw, nose, or he was all the more agreeable to Manuel Kulukundis, one of the bigsult, many afflicted persons return to work after being cured. It is well to reemphasize the fact that the primary concern is to eradicate the malignant cells, which means that the surgeon must be given free rein on the method to be used. Let him decide whether to operate, use radium or X-ray, or a combination.

Mouth cancers are not always easy to diagnose. In the past, when syphilis was rife, the man or woman with a positive Wassermann test was likely to be treated for syphilis whenever an ulcer developed in the mouth. The delay in making the diagnosis of cancer often spelled the difference between life and death. Nowadays, syphilis is treated more rapidly and, in addition, our modern physicians would suggest removal of a small piece of the ulcer for microscopic study (biopsy). The pre-cancerous lesion, leucoplakia, is given more serious consideration today. If these white patches which appear may become malignant at a later Stalin fell ill.

The End Of Stalin

WASHINGTON The possibility that Josef V. Stalin was somehow murdered by his heirs is no longer ruled out. Russian experts in the State Department and intelligence services were already amazed by the rapid reversal of the dead Stalin's policies. Then came the exoneration of the famous "murdering clique" of Kremlin doctors, who were arin the mouth are neglected, they rested and accused just before

> The "Pravda" announcement contained an unprecedented hint that evidence against the doctors had been extorted by torture. The whole event was astonishing. It has opened the field for every form of speculation, including the theory that Stalin was done away with by other leading members of the Soviet regime.

> At this stage, of course, this theory is speculation, pure and simple. Yet this highly colored theory is being soberly discussed by key men in the government. That is the best measure of the prevalence of wild surmise about Soviet policies and purposes.

Surmise is so prevalent in turn because of the impression that has been made here by the upheaval in Moscow. By now, you only have Delayed reactions to penicillin to itemize changes of policy aland blood transfusions occur but ready made, in order to be convinced that the upheaval has got

In the domestic sphere, Stalin was not in his grave before the Soviet government was made over. Actually, it would have been a simple matter for the U.S. government to have tied up many of these Greek ships immediately after this column's expose two years ago. First, there are clauses in several contracts permitting the government to recapture the ships they don't pass inspection. Second, it's easy for the Coast Guard's Office of Merchant Marine Safety to harass ships indefinitely with life-boat inspections, bilge inspections, health inspections, until a ship loses more money than it's worth to trade with the Reds.

But just the opposite of this hapsador Kennan, since he seems to pened. Instead, some of these Greek ships violated safety rules with impunity. And Kulukundis, for one, seemed to have dockside government officials eating out of his hand.

> For instance, here is a secret memo involving a Kulukundis ship, the S.S. Nathaniel B. Palmer, arrogantly asking for more time to prepare for government inspection following arrival at New Haven. Conn., on Nov. 16, 1948:

> "On his arrival at the dock, the master was greeted by American Bureau and Coast Guard officials. In view of the fact that Captain Diaz is 'very conscientious' about his loading, he respectfully requests that in the future he not be visited by government officials until he has had at least two hours pumping time. Enough said in

The implication, of course, is that Kulukundis had the power to delay U. S. government inspectors from inspecting his ships just as he was able to "induce" congressmen to pass special laws permitting him and his family to remain

These are just a few of the things Greek Wealth

He should also look into the way the Greeks got their ships and what they pay in taxes. Unlike thousands of other patriotic Greek-Americans, who have settled down in the U.S., the Greek shippers pay few taxes either in the U.S. or Greece. And they got their ships by paying 25 per cent down after a kindly Uncle Sam turned over 98 Liberty ships to the Tsaldaris government. Then, thanks to Marshall Plan trade, many Greeks paid for the entire cost of the ship in two or three voyages.

The basic questions are these: 1. Can a congressional committee "negotiate" an agreement with individuals on phases of certain controversial problems normally tackled by the executive branch of the government? The answer is that it has happened before, as a made no public endorsements, it few illustrations from past experi- was an open secret they were ence will coroborate.

2. Can a congressional committee or its individual members deal with ambassadors and representatives or foreign governments on matters of foreign policy? The answer is that they have done so in the past and probably will continue to do so in the future. No Court Restrictions

3. Is foreign policy exclusively an executive matter, or does the Senate have rights which grow out of the constitutional provision that treaties with foreign governments must be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate? The answer is with anybody in the world in order mittees, is entitled to communicate with anybody in he world in order to get the desired information for treaty-making purposes or for legislation generally affecting foreign countries. No restrictions have ever been imposed by the Supreme Court upon congressional committees in the gathering of informa- stance fresh in memory. tion from individuals inside or outside the United States.

For the fact is that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee under various administrations has permitted foreign ambassadors and ministers to discuss informally with committee members their proposed policies and to give "assurances" that have the force of

Perhaps the most outstanding example of a so-called agreement or understanding "negotiated" by members of a Senate committee occurred in 1920, when Viscount Grey came to America as British ambassador. He spent a good deal of time discussing an important question with the then chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the late Henry Cabot Lodge, grandfather of the present American representative on the UN. In various history books the subject matter of the conferences which the British diplomat had with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is despublicly after resigning his post immediately on his return to England that the so-called Lodge reservations to the Versailles Treaty covering American entry into the League of Nations should be accepted by the Allies. There are intimations in some of the historical works of that period that, in WASHINGTON-Viewed in the exchange for Britain's support of Lodge reservations would support Nations. The President favored this, but several Republican and Democratic senators had opposed

The press of Britain and France almost unanimously supported Viscount Grey's "agreement" on his return to Europe and, while the British and French governments ready to go along with his views and with the "agreement" he had reached with the American senators. This was an important "negotiation." The Wilson administration didn't like it. Had the "agreement," however, been concurred in by only a few of the Wilson supporters in the Senate, it might have changed the whole course of history and helped to prevent a second world war.

Prerogative Of Executive Time and again in the past, informal assurances of various kinds have been given the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate by diplomatic representatives of foerign governments, and this has had a great deal to do with the course of American executive and legislative policy. The conferences between American senators and diplomats of the government of India during the wheat negotiation a couple of years ago is an in-

In recent years, as large appropriations for foreign aid have been before Congress, it has not been unusual for foreign diplomats to contact senators and representatives. Reports of congressional sentiment or the private reactions of particular senators have been cabled back by the diplomats to their governments, and many a foreign policy matter has been affected by such arrangements. Also many senators and representatives on special committees have gone abroad in recent years on legislative missions and have frequently contacted high officials of foreign governments.

Whether one chooses to call all this "negotiations" or "infringement" on foreign-policy making is a quibble. Formal negotiations and agreements are, of course, the prerogative of the executive when made between governments. What individuals do, however, in relation to Congress, whether they be American citizens or foreign nationals or foreign government officials, seems to be largely between them and the memgers of Congress. One thing is clear - nothing can be "negotiated" by senators or representatives that binds the executive branch, though much can be done to influence policy on the legislative side and indirectly the

Burma is a country that lies southwest of China and is a gateway into the sub-continent of Asia. On the Yunnan-Burmese border are a number of aboriginal peoples of various Indo-Chinese or-

Since 1826 a part of British India. Burma on January 4, 1948, was recognized as a separate state by Great Britain. It did not become a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, preferring to stand alone. It is, however, a member of the United Nations.

Since it became independent, Burma has been beset by the usual effort of the Communists to infiltrate the country, producing considerable disorder. There have been a number of rebellious groups, the Karens, the White Flag Communists, the Red Flag Communists, Army Mutineers, dissident elements in the People's Volunteer Organization and a Nationalist Chinese guerilla band that moved into Burma from the province of Yunnan and has been fighting both the Burmese and the Chinese Communists since then.

Burma recognized Soviet China in December 1949. The Burmese have received financial aid from the British Commonwealth and from the United States. From the very start, however, its first prime minister, Thakin Nu. on May 26, 1948, formed a new party which set up a straight Marxist program. Since 1948, a strong anti-American and anti-British sentiment has expressed itself. not as much in the government as among the masses of the

The presence of the Nationalist Chinese guerrillas in Burma on the Yunnan border has been a factor of disturbance, particularly as the Burmese prefer to be on friendly terms with Mao Tze-Senator McCarthy should investi- tung's government. In many parts of Asia, it is believed that Russia and her great Asiatic satellite. Soviet China, will eventually triumph, that Russia will count noses between those who favored Soviet China and those who were opposed, and these countries prefer to play

Therefore, the Burmese would like the Nationalist Chinese guerrillas withdrawn. They have no way of dealing with Chiang Kaishek on the subject. Actually, his guerrillas have done considerable fighting there.

What happens is that the guerrillas fight to invade China, move in a distance, are driven back into

Burma. The Burmese try to prevent them from coming; the guerrillas get their arms and munitions, reform, go back across the border for some more fighting. This is excellent guerrilla tactics, keeping a Chinese Communist force pinned down on the border.

It probably will never be proved how these Chinese Nationalist guerrillas recruit their forces. Over the past four years, there must have been numerous casualties; yet the guerrillas have increased their numbers. It is probably that many Chinese living in Yunnan and in Burma have joined them. It is also possible that many Chinese from Formosa have made their way to this

The Burmese expected the government of the United States to force Chiang Kai-shek to withdraw these guerrillas. There are those in Washington who would favor some such pressure on Chiang, but Chiang is committed to the use of guerrillas on every entrance into China, if he can find a way of putting them there and using them. He will fight his guerrilla war against Soviet China as best he

Meanwhile the Burmese have come up with the extraordinarily novel idea that they will reject American financial assistance because the United States has failed to get Chiang's guerrillas out of Burma. This may sound like a new wrinkle in the United States, but many countries believe that they do us a favor by taking our aid. They believe that if they do not take our money, unemployment will increase in this country. It might be advantageous to let them have their way.

The Burmese are also citing Formosa as an aggressor in this situation. Chiang could, with good Oriental reasoning, establish that his government has no direction over these particular guerrillas, as they are Chinese who got stuck where they are by the course of events.

I know the kind of Chinese who compose these guerrilla bands. If Chiang interfered with their love of country and a good fight, they would repudiate him. They are the stuff that made the Yunnanese armies so effective in the civil wars of China. They are a powerful breed of men, mountaineers, who fight for their own soil.

Pistons show Dynalube gives better protection

Dirty piston above shows how inferior motor oil builds up varnish-like deposits on vital engine parts. A dirty engine has higher engine friction, uses more gas and oil, wears out faster . . . causes you needless expense.

Clean piston shows you how new Sunoco Dynalube, twice as detergent as before, dissolves engine deposits . . . keeps them in suspensionuntil nextoil change. (Formaximum protection, change oil every 1,000 miles.)

DYNALUBE is made for LONG OIL MILEAGE!

Make the dipstick test and prove to yourself that Dynalube gives you longer mileage, stays at a "safe" level longer to protect your engine better. Sunoco's Heavy-Duty Dynalube exceeds today's toughest engine requirements. This Spring, change to Dynalube!

General Assembly Burns Midnight Oil Before Windup Of Ninety-Day Session

Four-year terms for the Mayor and Council of Cumberland and authority to raise the operating tax levy to the $1.25 mark were authorized in a dozen of Western Maryland measures signed into law yesterday by Governor McKeldin.

Sponsored by Delegate Fred Driscoll, House Bill 589 will extend the term of elected city officials of Cumberland from two to four years, beginning with the next election.

The plan was approved last week
